Journalist and activist Irshad Manji hosts and produces In the Public Interest, an investigative feature on Vision TV, Canada's faith network. A former national affairs editorialist with the Ottawa Citizen, Manji also writes online columns for the Toronto Star and teaches media literacy to young people. Her 1997 book, Risking Utopia: On the Edge of a New Democracy chronicles how Canadian youth are turning alienation into meaningful participation. Maclean's magazine has identified 29 year-old Irshad Manji as one of 100 "Canadians to watch", and in its September, 1997 issue, U.S.-based Ms. magazine calls her a "Feminist for The 21st Century." Finally, The Globe and Mail has recognized her as a "media-savvy voice for progressive politics from someone you'd definitely like to party with". Here's our chance...
